

CHAT

Transport bicycle

From the middle of May 2019, Van Raam will be launching its latest bike on the market: The Chat. The chat is intended for cycling together with children or adults who can no longer participate in traffic alone. One accompanying person rides with one or two persons. Soon there will be more information about this bike on our website.

Origin of the Chat

In 2018, Van Raam came into contact with Cycling Without Age (CWA). The social enterprise offers (lonely) elderly people all over the world the opportunity to go on bicycle tours together again with the help of Riksjaa-like bicycles.

The founder of CWA and Van Raam agreed that the current rickshaw bikes needed an update, so Van Raam decided to consider a new contemporary version of a rickshaw bike. And so it happened...

Development of the Chat

Our research and development department took up this challenge and within 6 months we were able to design a bike which was given the appropriate name "Chat". The chat allows a rider to transport two passengers sitting next to each other on a bench on the front of the bike.

Purpose of the Chat

On the Chat it is possible to talk to each other during a bicycle tour (Chatting). Older people, for example, can explore the city together with young people and take on the role of a "guide", telling stories from the past and leading them out of their isolation for a while. In addition, the bicycle is also suitable for people who want to take a guided tour, care facilities, but also e.g. for holiday parks.

Features of the Chat

- ✓ A weapon against loneliness
- ✓ Simple steering
- ✓ Many storage possibilities
- ✓ Unique, powerful pedal support with a reverse function
- ✓ Dutch design, Made in Holland
